Mr. Ralph Billingsley, who has a position as timekeeper for the Atlanta Steel Co., writes his friends that he is well pleased with the Gate City. Ralph is a steady and intelligent boy and deserves success.

The Ocala House dining and lunch rooms did a big business Sunday, many people taking their dinners in the handsome new dining room. This establishment is giving the best of service and the people appreciate it.

Mr. J. L. Smoak and a friend will be treated to bottled coca-cola if they will call at the bath house refreshment stand at Silver Springs and present this notice. The Ocala Coca-Cola Bottling Works.

Mr. W. T. Gary returned this afternoon from a visit to relatives in South Carolina.

Mr. D. W. Tompkins showed us today a cinco pesos (about $5) note issued by the Mexican government under Madero. It was very handsome, and if a man had enough of them they would do very well to paper a room.

Yesterday was rally day at the Methodist Sunday school, and while the attendance was not as large as the leaders had hoped it would be, there was quite a large attendance. Some of the classes had a full attendance and others made a fair record for the occasion. The business men's class, in which a number of the church people have been taking a special interest for the past year and a half, had an attendance of 58, which, however, is only about 50 per cent of its membership. It was decided by this class to issue special invitations to the organizations of like nature over the state to attend the state Bible class meetings to be held here next week, which it is hoped will largely swell the list of delegates. Now that the weather is getting cooler the Methodists will make a special effort to repeat their record of last winter by increasing the attendance at each Sunday's sessions.

Mr. A. G. Moree, the engine machinist of the A. C. L. here, says he wishes some of the high school boys would quit using the new chimney at the waterworks plant for a jail. Friday night, while he was repairing an engine on a track near the waterworks, he heard vigorous calls for help. On investigating, he found two high school boys shut in the stack. Some of their comrades—they would not tell who—had either decoyed or shoved them into the chimney and shut the door, which can only be opened from the outside. The boys testified that the chimney made quite a secure jail.

Miss Louise Booe left Saturday for Jacksonville, where she will teach school this winter. The traveling bag left by Miss Booe on the Dunnellon road a few days ago was found by a colored man and returned to her.

BARNES-CHERRY

Mr. Orion Barnes and Miss Thelma Cherry of Irvine were married Saturday afternoon by Judge Smith in his office. The couple have the best wishes of their many friends.

After a severe illness, Corporal Clarence Blalock was able to be out today, though very weak. He will rejoin his company as soon as he is strong enough.

Mr. Grover Puterbaugh has returned from his vacation near the mouth of Crystal River and is again at his post in the Court Pharmacy.

How strange was war! The news that the Gerel was lost with almost all her crew had brought to Bob exultation, triumph; yet, in the wild maelstrom of the sea off Cape Hatteras, his countrymen were risking their lives in little boats to save a score of that crew—that crew who in the morning had shelled Virginia Beach. And, likely enough, inside the Hatteras keys, or in protected waters elsewhere, the enemy submarines were waiting out the storm, or along the coast they were lurking on shelves of sand a hundred feet below the surface. Well, at least tonight they could not strike, and the regent's air craft also must be useless. But was not the gale beginning to lessen? There was no doubt of it; and through the clouds to the east there was showing the gray of dawn.

Nellie Wendell, on her knees by the window of her room in her father's house at Elgin, saw the dawn. The ships had come in the evening that she had from Hampton Roads had been engaged. They had driven off and damaged several of the enemy's ships. Nellie did not know certainly upon which of the American ships Bob was. She was not certain, indeed, that he was upon any of them, but she believed he had been in the battle. The bulletin which came to Elgin gave no account of American casualties; so, as she waited for more definite word, she prayed—as those who wait must often pray—in perfectly irrational petition. She prayed that her husband had not been killed. Of course if he was killed, he was killed, and prayer could not alter that; but thus that night Nellie had prayed as girls and women like her were praying in ten thousand homes.

With the dawn strangely there came to her faith that her husband still was safe. So convinced was she of it, somehow, that she bent her head in utterance of thanksgiving to God for having brought her husband through the battle; then, humbly, fervently, she petitioned that he still might be spared. How empty and strange the big house was! Bob was away, of course; Jim also was gone. The door of his room stood open. He was with his regiment in Chicago, where there were terrible mobs and rioting, the bulletins said. Troops had fired and had been fired upon; bombs had been thrown and many militiamen killed. Was it possible that Jim might have been in greater danger that night than Bob?
